

Greetings,

While I recognize the inexorable march of time will tromp through the fields of amateur radio, I feel compelled to emphasize two points. Change, for the sake of change, is energy poorly spent. Secondly, and more importantly, yielding to the loudest group is not the wisest course of action.

Amateur radio needs to, and exists to cater to multiple services, and therefore modes. History has shown that "gentlemen's agreement" band-planning is at best, a joke. There is no viable argument to not pass RM-10352. Please do not hasten the demise of amateur radio.

Respectfully,
